"Windows of Opportunity"

Praised as "The Gem of Worcester County" on its completion in 1888, Gale Free Library, also known as the Damon Memorial, still sparkles in the town center of Holden. A grand Romanesque revival building, the Library was given a major makeover and a modern addition in 1989. However, the original windows were only maintained at that time, not replaced. They've been periodically scraped, reglazed, and repainted. But they're essentially unchanged since 1888. The windows are now failing because of age. Library and town officials agree it's time to fully restore these beautiful architectural features. See page 5 to find out how you can help with our "Windows of Opportunity" fundraising campaign.

A Late Opening for the Gale Free Library?

M. Addie Holden's picture hangs in the Gale Free Library today.

As many of you may know, especially if you attended the 125th Anniversary Celebration of the Damon Memorial—Gale Free Library in 2013, the Memorial and Library were dedicated on August 29, 1888. What you may not know is that the Library did not open on Dedication Day. In fact, the Gale Free Library didn't officially open for circulation until November 30, 1888.*

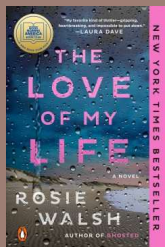

Why do you think three months passed before Holden's long-awaited town library threw open its doors to the community? Most likely, for several reasons. First of all, the original staff of the Library consisted of one person, Librarian M. Addie Holden (today's staff numbers 19!). And second, Addie had her hands full. Now that the Town had a public library, The Holden Library Association (housed on the Second Floor of Town Hall) turned over their sizeable collection to the Gale Free and disbanded. Founders Samuel C. Gale and Susan (Damon) Gale contributed $3,000.00 toward the purchase of new volumes, while John Wadsworth of Chicago provided $100.00 for the same purpose. Addie chose to wrap each volume in brown paper, and applied her own numbering system to the protective paper, using a dip pen and bottle of ink. Periodical and magazine subscriptions were purchased and the first new issues, catalogued. A system for circulating materials also had to be developed and put in place. And, of course, Addie had administrative duties to perform, including meeting with the Damon Memorial Trustees, responding to mail, and developing a way to present each item in the Library's collection in one place (the latter project took another two years). Not to mention that at least some of Addie's work was done under the light of kerosene-fueled lamps. So we say, "Hats off to Addie!"

Holden High School, which was on the Second Floor of the Damon from 1888 to June 1926, opened in its new quarters in September 1888.*

$3,100.00 for library books doesn't sound like much of a budget to modern ears, but in the 1880s hardcover volumes usually sold for less than $2.00 apiece.*

I Must Betray You
By Ruta Sepetys

A rare look at the youth-led rebellion that toppled Romania's Ceaușescu. Seventeen-year-old Cristian Florescu ... is as much of a rebel as it's possible to be in Bucharest, Romania, in 1989. Communist dictator Nicolae Ceaușescu has been in power for 24 years, and most Romanians live in poverty, exporting what they produce to unknowingly fund Ceaușescu's obscenely extravagant lifestyle Sepetys brilliantly blends a staggering amount of research with heart, craft, and insight in a way very few writers can.

"Windows of Opportunity"

"Windows of Opportunity," a fundraising campaign led by the Friends of Gale Free Library, aims to help by raising $200,000 toward the total restoration and repair of the 60 exterior windows in the original Damon Memorial building.
